Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wright mourn the loss of their ten weeks old baby. It died of congestion of the lungs last Monday.

The school picnic last Friday on the shore of Lake Michigan was a great success. Old and young anticipated and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

The promotional exercises last Thursday evening, were enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The pupils reflected great credit on themselves and their instructors.

Our community was shocked last Tuesday evening, on hearing of the death of Mrs. George Bender. She was present at the decoration exercises the day previous. The funeral and burial were in Coloma, her home previous to her marriage. She leaves motherless two little girls.

All humors of the blood, from the pimple to the dreadful scrofula sore, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which thoroughly purifies and enriches the blood.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick head ache, indigestion, biliousness. 25 cents.

Among our latter-day English men of letters, none has more rapidly attained a peculiar distinction than Mr. I. Zangwill. Although not yet over thirty-two years of age; he has won reputation as dramatist, essayist, versifier, humorist.

I. Zangwill

From The Sunday School Times.

But he is perhaps best known, and seems most likely to be longest remembered, by his studies of Jewish life and character. He took his degree with honors at the London University while a board-school teacher, employing his off hours in hard study. Having graduated, he at once adopted literature as his profession, and started out determined to succeed in spite of the fact that he was without money or influential friends to aid him. When quite young he won the prize in a competition for the best short story; later, wrote a story which excited the ire of his Jewish readers; started, edited and killed a journal. Subsequently came the more serious work evident in his book, "The Children of the Ghetto," and the volume of short stories, "Ghetto Tragedies." Mr. Zangwill's works have been translated into seven languages. He has sometimes been called the "Jewish Dickens." He has of late been traveling in the East, exploring the ghettos dealt with in his series of historical romances, the latest of which will soon appear under the title "Dreamers of the Ghetto." An article written for The Sunday School Times of May 29, on "Early Jewish Education: Its Philosophy and Content," shows Mr. Zangwill's rare power of treating in a delightfully readable and attractive, yet thoroughly finished style, a subject that might seem to be, at first glance, a trifle dry and uninteresting.

A Good Story from Niles.

D. B. Cook, editor of the Niles Mirror, and Major L. A. Duncan, editor of the Republican, are the pioneer journalists of south-western Michigan. Incidentally, each is proud of the fact that his handwriting is as blind as Egyptian hieroglyphics, and either's scribbling would put Horace Greeley to shame. Several years ago, Editor Cook sent a note to Maj. Duncan, and the "devil" acted as messenger. For the life of him, Duncan could not make out half a dozen words. Mr. Duncan then wrote a return note to Mr. Cook, informing him that he could not read his letter, and incidentally advising him to take a few lessons at some writing school. When Mr. Cook received Mr. Duncan's letter, he spent an afternoon trying to figure out what his brother newspaper man had written, but had to give up in disgust. The correspondence ended there.
